WHO SHOULD ATTEND

The short course will provide a basic understanding of what INCI is and how nomenclature is assigned and then how it should be used on back label and consumer disclosure in personal care products. It will be especially valuable to personnel in the following areas:

- Formulation Development
- Technical Service & Sales
- Regulatory & Safety

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of this 1½ hr. mini-course, you will be able to:

- Describe INCI
- Submit an application for nomenclature assignment
- Outline global implications and US labeling guidelines
- List how this will impact other emerging regulations (such as REACH)

COURSE DESCRIPTION

In 1973 The Cosmetic, Toiletry, Fragrance Association (CTFA) developed an industry voluntary process for assigning ingredient names that provide the consumer and medical field a common approach to understanding what is formulated in a personal care product. This process was accepted by the United States Food & Drug Administration (FDA) and the global regulatory community, eventually becoming known as the International Cosmetic Ingredient Dictionary & Handbook (INCI). This course will provide a basic understanding of the process to assign monographed nomenclature for ingredients used in consumer personal care products, along with how this is harmonized between the United States and the rest of the global community. The session will provide a snapshot of what INCI is, how it works, and how one should utilize it to meet government regulations and communication to the consumer. The course outline includes:

- Definition of INCI
- Key objectives of the committee and process
- How INCI is being transformed and transforming the global community
- How the process works
- Do's and don't's to using an assigned monograph name
- The future
